

The Founding Principles

Ryotokuji University was founded with the following principles in mind. Firstly, for Japan and the Japanese to inherit our native and cultural spirit of beauty and harmony, and to generate new values, we provide an enriched environment in which the younger generation, the spearhead of our future, can engage in their studies with a seriousness of purpose. Secondly, we aim to rear those men and women who are able to uphold the importance of both cooperation and independence, to cherish their hopes at all times, and to live in good fellowship with others. And finally, we pledge to make regional, national and international contributions upon the foundation of this university.

The emblem of four leaves in the University's coat of arms stands for 'Independence, Cooperation, Hope and Fellowship', and the circle surrounding them for 'Harmony'. By synthesizing schools of medicine and arts, we aim to contribute to the creation of a new society and pursue to be an ever-lasting academic institution for those who will inherit our dedicated aspirations.
